Bericht

Op 13 december vonden de halfjaarlijkse consultaties over Centraal-Afrika plaats. Op Uruguay en Bolivia na spraken alle leden in de besloten consultaties. Het rapport besloeg de volledige regio maar de meeste VR-leden selecteerden 2-3 landensituaties in hun interventies. 10.2 a 10.2 a voegden daar aan toe deze regionale briefing een nuttig instrument te vinden voor early warning en om de regionale connecties tussen de verschillende conflicten in kaart te brengen.

At least 15,000 Cameroonian refugees flee to Nigeria amid crackdown

ABUJA, Jan 11 (Reuters) - More than 15,000 Cameroonian refugees have fled to Nigeria amid a crackdown on Anglophone separatists, the United Nations (UN) refugee agency and Nigerian government officials said on Thursday.

The once-fringe English-speaking movement in majority French-speaking Cameroon has gathered pace in the last few months after a military crackdown on protests, leading it to declare independence in October for a breakaway "Ambazonia" state it wants to create. The move poses the biggest challenge yet to the 35-year rule of President Paul Biya, who will seek re-election this year, and the violent repression he has unleashed has driven thousands of people from English-speaking regions across the border into Nigeria.

More than 8,000 refugees have been registered in the southeastern state of Cross River alone, said Antonio Jose Canhandula, the UN High Commissioner for Refugees' (UNHCR) representative in Nigeria, at a briefing in Abuja.

A further 6,700 or so Cameroonian refugees have crossed into neighbouring Benue state, said Sadiya Umar Farouq, the head of Nigeria's National Commission for Refugees, Migrants and Internally Displaced Persons, citing Benue officials.

There are also at least 350 refugees in the states of Taraba and Akwa Ibom, said Tamuno Dienye Jaja, deputy comptroller general of the Nigeria Immigration Service.

The refugees are mostly children, women and the elderly, with very few young men, the officials said.

"Certainly there are more, how many more we are not able to state," said the UNHCR's Canhandula.

"They are still coming, and they are coming daily," he said. "It is a crisis."

More food assistance, education and social services are needed, particularly as a number of the women are pregnant at a young age, were all issues, Canhandula said.

Nigeria's Farouq pledged the government's support.

"We are going to do all that we can to bring some kind of relief," she said.

Nigerian and Cameroonian officials have met to discuss the refugees and those talks are ongoing, she said, although she declined to give details.

The separatist movement, including armed radical elements, has strained bilateral relations between the two countries.

Last week, Nigerian authorities took 12 leaders of the separatists, including the chairman of the self-declared Governing Council of Ambazonia, into custody after they gathered for a meeting in a hotel in the Nigerian capital Abuja, people familiar with the matter said.

Cameroonian troops last month crossed into Nigeria in pursuit of rebels without seeking Nigerian authorization, leading to diplomatic wrangling behind the scenes.

The unrest in Cameroon began in November, when English-speaking teachers and lawyers in the Northwest and Southwest regions of Cameroon that neighbour Nigeria, frustrated with having to work in French, took to the streets calling for reforms and greater autonomy. French is the official language for most of Cameroon, but English is spoken in the two regions.

Groet,

De nouveaux actes de violence dans les régions du Nord-Ouest et du Sud-Ouest du Cameroun ont causé la mort d'au moins trois membres des forces de sécurité et de plusieurs civils. De tels actes ne sauraient être acceptés et ne peuvent rester impunis, de même que tout excès de violence à l'encontre de civils. Leurs auteurs doivent en répondre en justice, en conformité avec la loi.

Le recours à la violence ne peut permettre d'atteindre des objectifs politiques. Il reste essentiel que les forces de sécurité fassent un usage proportionné de la force dans l'exercice de leurs fonctions.

L'Union européenne appelle à éviter tout acte qui puisse attiser les tensions ou inciter à la violence entre Camerounais. Elle reste convaincue que seul un dialogue sincère et constructif, en suivant les voies démocratiques et constitutionnelles, pourra conduire à une sortie durable de la crise tout en préservant l'unité et la paix pour tous les Camerounais.

* MALI

You will have seen that we issued a statement yesterday evening in which the Secretary-General strongly condemned the attack that killed four Bangladeshi peacekeepers and seriously injured four others in Mopti region. This incident happened one day after six members of the Malian armed forces died from another improvised explosive device attack in the central area of the country.

The Secretary-General conveys his condolences to the Governments of Bangladesh and Mali and his profound sympathies to the families and loved ones of the victims. And he wishes a swift recovery to the injured.

*SYRIA

In Geneva, Staffan de Mistura, the Special Envoy for Syria, briefed reporters in Geneva today about his ongoing political work, and added that today, the priority must be stopping the suffering and the tragedy of the civilians in Eastern Ghouta and elsewhere. We cannot see a copycat of Aleppo taking place, he warned.

His Special Adviser for humanitarian issues, Jan Egeland, told the press that Eastern Ghouta is devoid of respect for international law, saying that 24 attacks had been reported between 18 and 22 February, including attacks on 14 hospitals, 3 health centres and 2 ambulances.

Between 19 and 25 February, 540 people – including 114 women and 155 children – were reportedly killed and 3,057 people were reportedly injured during the fighting in the area.

The only United Nations delivery of assistance to Eastern Ghouta in 2018 was on 14 February, when a convoy with assistance for 7,200 people reached Nashabiyah. The UN and humanitarian partners continue to stand ready to deliver humanitarian assistance to the besieged enclave.

*MYANMAR-BANGLADESH

The Assistant Secretary-General for Human Rights Andrew Gilmour will be in Cox's Bazar, Bangladesh, from tomorrow to 4 March, where he will visit camps housing Rohingya refugees from Myanmar and speak to those who fled across the border in recent weeks.

Mr. Gilmour will also meet with local government officials and non-governmental organisations, as well as United Nations and other humanitarian partners.

In Dhaka on 5 March, he is due to meet with senior Government officials and representatives from Bangladesh's National Human Rights Commission to discuss the human rights situation in Cox's Bazar. At the end of his visit, there will be a statement to the media there.

*CAMEROON

Turning to Cameroon, the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Central Africa, François Loundé Fall, is indeed in Cameroon to consult on and assess recent developments in the South-West and North-West regions of the country and encourage a peaceful resolution of the crisis through dialogue and in accordance with international standards of human rights and humanitarian law.

Mr. Fall held consultations in Yaoundé, in Douala and in the two concerned regions, including with Government officials, political stakeholders, the diplomatic corps and civil society, among others.

His visit to Cameroon will end on 4 March.

*SUDAN

The Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict, Virginia Gamba, concluded a five-day mission to Sudan, including to Darfur and South Kordofan. She expressed satisfaction at the progress made in the implementation of the Action Plan to end and prevent the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict signed in 2016 by the Government of Sudan, but she noted that more needs to be done to ensure that all children in Sudan continue to be protected from violence.

Progress includes the issuance of command orders by all Government security forces and allowing dialogue between the UN and non-state armed groups who are also engaged in Action Plans with the UN. Access has also allowed for joint UN-Government monitoring and verification missions, and training of security forces in all affected conflict states in 2017. But despite the good news, violence still affects hundreds of children across Sudan, particularly in Darfur.

*CHAD

Our humanitarian colleagues tell us that clashes in northern Central African Republic (CAR) have continued to trigger influxes of people seeking refuge into neighbouring southern Chad.

The UN Refugee Agency (UNHCR) and the National Refugee Agency (CNARR) in Chad have registered over 20,000 new refugees with groups of people continuing to cross the border.

UNHCR is coordinating humanitarian assistance and distributing non-food items, while the World Food Programme is carrying out food distributions as Non-Governmental Organizations run mobile clinics.

Relocations are ongoing to refugee camps or host villages, further away from the border, but these are challenged by limited hosting capacities and lack of resources.

Southern Chad is already hosting some 77,000 refugees and 43,000 Chadian returnees.

*LIBYA

Turning to Libya, the UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs says they are deeply concerned by the intensification of armed conflict in Sebha, in southern Libya, over the past week. At least six civilians have been killed and several more have been injured since the beginning of hostilities in Sebha in early February. Sebha's main hospital has been hit by crossfire multiple times over this period. Some 600 people are reported to have fled the impacted neighbourhoods to other locations within Sebha district but most people are confined to their homes as a result of the clashes.

Humanitarian health providers are supporting medical facilities in the area to cope with incoming casualties. The Humanitarian Coordinator for Libya, Maria do Valle Ribeiro, has called on all parties to abide by their obligations under international humanitarian law, and to protect civilians and civilian infrastructure.

*FOOD PRICE

An update from our colleagues at the Food and Agriculture Organization in Rome, who released their Food Price Index for last month.

It shows that rising world prices for staple grains and dairy products more than offset lower prices for vegetable oils, leading global food commodity prices up 1.1 percent in February.

The FAO also lowered its projections for worldwide wheat harvests this year, while noting that inventory levels are poised to hit a record high.

Unfavorable weather in South America and Southern Africa, along with an expected contraction in plantings, points to a likely output decline for maize in the southern hemisphere.

*IODINE DEFICIENCY

UNICEF and the NGO Global Alliance for Improved Nutrition say today in a report that nearly 19 million babies born globally every year are at risk of permanent brain damage and reduced cognitive function due to a lack of iodine in the earliest years of life.

More than 1 in 4 of these children – 4.3 million – lives in South Asia.

Insufficient iodine during pregnancy and infancy results in neurological and psychological deficits, reducing a child's IQ.

This translates into major losses in the cognitive capital of entire nations and thus [has] a negative impact on their socio-economic development.

*DRUGS

The International Narcotics Control Board (INCB) launched its Annual Report for 2017 in Vienna

today. In the report, the Board highlights that the need for treatment and rehabilitation largely outstrips the availability of services.

The Board urges Governments to place more emphasis on treatment and rehabilitation – with particular attention to the needs of special populations – rather than just focusing on prevention.

The Board also calls on the international community and Afghanistan to work together to reprioritize responses to the drug challenge in that country.

*HONOUR ROLL

Now that the Winter Olympics are finished, our friends in Seoul have paid their regular budget dues in full.

The Republic of Korea brings us up to 62, in our count.

*PRESS CONFERENCE

This afternoon at 3:00 p.m., Ambassador Karel van Oosterom, Permanent Representative of the Kingdom of the Netherlands and President of the Security Council for the month of March will be here to answer everything that you always wanted to ask him.

Subject: UPR Cameroon: urgent update

Dear colleagues,

HRW emergencies researchers have just returned from a three-week mission to Cameroon.

They documented human rights violations by government security forces against the country's Anglophone minority, including arbitrary arrests, excessive force against demonstrators, extrajudicial executions, and the burning of homes and villages (including 18 villages reported to have been totally or partially destroyed between January and April 2018). They also documented abuses by armed separatist groups, including threats, killings, and attacks on schools.

HRW is deeply concerned at the escalation of violations and abuses since the government's violent repression in late 2017 of largely peaceful protests organised by members of the Anglophone minority campaigning for independence.

These concerns are reflected in a joint statement by 6 UN Special Procedures underlining that "human rights must be respected to end the cycle of violence": <http://www.ohchr.org/en/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=22409&LangID=E>

Cameroon's UPR review will take place in just over a week, on Wednesday, 16 May. We are aware that delegations will have already drafted their interventions, but in view of the recent and continuing escalation of violence, we urge delegations to include recommendations, if they have not already done so, designed to restore the rule of law before the situation further deteriorates.

Please find below and attached our one-page update with an overview of the situation and suggested UPR recommendations.

Feel free to contact us if you would like additional information, and thank you for your consideration of this urgent matter.

Best regards,

UPR Update: Cameroon

30th session of the UPR, May 2018

During a recent three-week research mission to Cameroon in April 2018, Human Rights Watch (HRW) documented numerous human rights violations committed by government forces, including arbitrary arrests, use of excessive force against demonstrators, the burning of homes and property in villages, and extrajudicial executions. Humanitarian sources have documented the total or partial burning of 18 villages between January and April 2018, most likely by government forces. Witnesses interviewed by HRW described seeing gendarmes place fuel canisters against houses, and those who had fled to the bush reported seeing plumes of black smoke coming from villages shortly after the arrival of government security forces. In at least four cases, older persons left behind were reported burnt alive in their homes.

HRW also documented abuses by armed separatist groups, including attacks on schools, killings of members of the security forces and other state workers as well as threats and extortion. HRW heard from witnesses that separatist activists threatened the lives of teachers and children and committed arson on schools. According to local authorities, at least 32,000 children have been out of school since November 2017. Between 20,000 and 50,000 Cameroonians are estimated to have fled to Nigeria's Benue and Cross River states.

Violence has escalated since events in November 2016, and between September and October 2017, when government security forces used excessive force against five largely peaceful demonstrations organized by members of the country's Anglophone minority, located primarily in the south-west of the country, who were calling for the region's independence. Security forces, equipped with anti-riot gear including shields, helmets and tear gas, used live ammunition, including from helicopters, against demonstrators equipped at most with stones, and against unarmed bystanders, killing at least a dozen people and injuring scores.

Since then, the government crackdown has led to an escalation in violence, with armed separatists attacking government workers, and security forces carrying out abusive and indiscriminate attacks against localities suspected of supporting secessionist groups.

Several UN Special Procedures, in a joint statement issued in November 2017, urged the government to respect human rights to end the cycle of violence. HRW is concerned that left unchecked, violations and abuses will continue to escalate. The UPR represents an important opportunity to ensure international scrutiny and recommend measures to restore the rule of law.

Recommendations

- Ensure that any counter separatist operations are conducted with full respect for international human rights law and that all victims of human rights violations have access to effective remedies.
- Ensure all reported cases of violations and abuses are investigated and perpetrators held to account in accordance with the rule of law;

- Release all those arbitrarily detained in the context of the crisis and ensure that those charged with offences enjoy full due process, and any and all charges are supported by credible evidence, admissible at trial;
- Allow and facilitate unhindered humanitarian assistance to the affected areas in order to provide relief for victims of violations abuses;
- Accept visits by relevant UN Special Procedures and facilitate monitoring and reporting to the Human Rights Council.

PV en PC gaven 18/7 een achtergrondbriefing voor meer dan vijftientig NGOs die zich hebben aangesloten bij de Working Group fort he Security Council. Dit is een van de manieren waarop invulling wordt gegeven aan het inclusieve en transparante lidmaatschap van de VNVR. different topic

. Ook werd er aandacht gevraagd voor de situatie in Kameroen, waarbij wel degelijk aan 'early warning' is gedaan maar nog geen 'early action' mee gepaard gaat. Duidelijk is dat er naar KNL wordt gekeken gezien de prioriteit die er binnen ons lidmaatschap aan preventie van conflict wordt gegeven.

Subject: New HRW Report on Abuses in Cameroon's Anglophone Regions

Dear all,

I am writing to share a new Human Rights Watch report on Cameroon, “‘These Killings Can Be Stopped’: Abuses by Government and Separatist Groups in Cameroon’s Anglophone Regions.” We have both English and French versions available.

This report, which we launched yesterday at the UN, is based on an April 2018 mission to the country. Our researchers conducted 82 interviews with victims and witnesses of abuses and key informants. My colleagues also analyzed satellite images showing recent burning in 20 villages and verified half a dozen videos showing abuses or their aftermath.

Among our many recommendations, HRW is asking that the UNSC request a briefing from the Secretary-General on the situation in the country, as well as ask for an immediate end to human rights abuses and make clear that further abuses may lead to targeted sanctions. We believe this situation could potentially spiral and have regional implications if neglected, and, for these reasons, merits Council attention through a conflict prevention lens.

I've pasted our press release below for your convenience.

Please do reach out should you have any questions.

Very best,

Cameroon: Killings, Destruction in Anglophone Regions Government and Separatists Abuse Civilians

(New York, July 19, 2018) – Government security forces and armed separatists have committed grave abuses against residents of Cameroon's Anglophone region, Human Rights Watch said in a report released today. The region has been roiled by protests and violent clashes rooted in long-standing political grievances by the country's Anglophone minority.

Based on research in the region, satellite imagery analysis and video analysis, the 59-page report "'These Killings Can Be Stopped': Government and Separatist Groups Abuses in Cameroon's Anglophone Regions" found that both government forces and armed separatists have abused civilians in the western part of the country, displacing over 180,000 people since December 2017. Anglophone separatists have extorted, kidnapped and killed civilians, and prevented children from going to school. In response to protests and violence by armed separatists, government forces have killed civilians, used excessive force against demonstrators, tortured and mistreated suspected separatists and detainees, and burned hundreds of homes in several villages.

"The human rights situation in Cameroon has reached crisis level and could still get much worse," said Mausi Segun, Africa director at Human Rights Watch. "International action is needed to ensure that both sides protect civilians and ensure justice for crimes against them."

Human Rights Watch documented abuses by both government forces and a variety of separatist between late 2016 and May 2018. Human Rights Watch interviewed 51 victims, relatives of victims, or witnesses of abuse, as well as 31 education and medical professionals, lawyers, and key international sources. The interviews were conducted in the northwest and southwest regions of Cameroon in April.

Human Rights Watch also analyzed satellite imagery of villages in these regions, reviewed written complaints to a local organization following abuses by security forces, and collected dozens of videos and photographs that appear to show government security forces abusing civilians or burning villages, or the aftermath of such abuses. For six of the videos, Human Rights Watch confirmed the location and time of the recordings.

The crisis in the Anglophone regions stems from events in late 2016, when local lawyers and teachers mobilized over demands for respect of the region's Anglophone educational and judicial systems. This escalated into armed confrontations following heavy-handed repression by government security forces. The Cameroonian government negotiated with lawyers and teachers' unions in early 2017, but its security forces continued to clamp down on Anglophone protesters, including the arrest of two prominent negotiators on January 17, 2017.

At the same time, separatist activists who seek an independent state for the country's English-speaking regions began to set fire to schools and attack teachers and students to enforce a boycott they had declared on local schools. In June 2018, UNICEF reported that at least 58 schools had been damaged since the beginning of the crisis in 2016. Human Rights Watch documented 19 threats or attacks on schools, and 10 threats or attacks on education personnel.

In late 2017, Anglophone diaspora groups formed an interim government for the self-declared "Republic of Ambazonia" and called for mass demonstrations. Government security forces responded violently, killing over 20 people and arresting hundreds.

On January 29, 2018, Nigerian authorities arrested and handed over 47 Anglophone activists – including the interim president of the "Republic of Ambazonia" – to Cameroonian authorities. Since then, armed separatists have mobilized more supporters and resources and ramped up attacks on government security forces.

In response, government security forces conducted abusive counterinsurgency operations in the area. In armed operations in 12 villages in the northwest and southwest regions between January and April 2018, government security forces shot and killed in total over a dozen civilians, including at least seven people with intellectual and/or psychosocial or physical disabilities who were unable or refused to flee. Witnesses also told Human Rights Watch that at least four older women who were left behind by their relatives at the time of the attack were burnt alive when security forces set their houses on fire.

A 43-year-old man described finding his 69-year-old mother's remains after a government operation in Bole in the northwest region on March 23, 2018. "I found that everything in the house was burned, including my mother," he said. "When the military came, my wife and children ran but my mother couldn't. She died a terrible death. We only found her head and intestines. Everything else was burned."

Human Rights Watch reviewed satellite images of 131 villages in the southwest region. From those, 20 of the villages had clear evidence of building destruction consistent with arson. The total number of destroyed buildings came to at least 1,800.

Human Rights Watch interviewed people from five of these 20 locations who described fleeing as security forces entered the village, and then watching from a distance as smoke rose in the air.

Videos posted to YouTube and Twitter appear to show burned buildings in the southwest region. Human Rights Watch verified the location of six videos that showed destruction in four villages. In a video from one of the villages, Azi, security forces can be seen setting a building on fire.

As of May, at least 160,000 people were internally displaced, with 80 percent of them hiding in the forest. At least 20,000 Cameroonians have sought refuge in Nigeria since late 2017, according to United Nations agencies.

In meetings with Human Rights Watch in the capital Yaoundé in June, senior government ministers said President Paul Biya has authorized investigations into the allegations of abuses and acknowledged it was possible that some security personnel had committed “excesses.” But officials expressed doubts that government forces had burned buildings on a large scale. In a June 2018 humanitarian aid plan, however, the government budgeted for the reconstruction of 10,000 family homes.

The Cameroonian government should swiftly follow through on its promises to investigate these allegations and do so in a transparent manner, and take concrete actions to protect civilians, such as the deployment of military judicial police officers on operations to monitor the conduct of security forces and advise commanding officers, as it responds to armed separatists, Human Rights Watch said. It should allow independent international monitors, including the UN Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights, to access and work in the regions.

On July 16, the Government of Cameroon formally responded to Human Rights Watch's findings.

Armed separatist leaders should call on their supporters to stop abuses against civilians and to allow children to attend school, Human Rights Watch said.

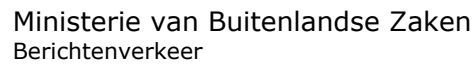

International entities, including the UN and African Union, and international partners of Cameroon – including the United States and France – should press both sides to take swift and concrete action to protect civilians and ensure justice for crimes against them.

“Despite the abuses and provocations by armed separatists, the government should never be attacking civilians and burning villages,” Segun said. “Both sides should recognize they won’t reach their goal by perpetuating the cycle of violence, and work toward a negotiated solution.”

Dear 10 2 e

As discussed, I am putting you in touch with my colleague 10 2 e who covers Cameroon in our team and is more than happy to meet with you to discuss the situation.

I'll leave it up to you guys to find a date and time later this week.
